- DEDICATION -

Dedicated to the closeknit and supportive Papercraft and Gaming Communities who have brought me so much enjoyment.

Just trying to return the favor..

- INTRODUCTION -

I was mounding on some Kentucky Fried Chicken while working on deck plans for some other TRAVELLER RPG project when I got to thinking about "that bucket". How big a ship would that actually physically represent in original old school 15mm scale? (Half-inch = 1.5 meters / 5 feet)

A few measurements and some pencil pushing calculations yielded a 750 dTon (displacement ton) tail-sitter vessel. (In TRAVELLER, one displacement ton equates to two squares assuming 3 meters or 2 squares high in volume.) Of course, I HAD to get out my rule books and design out those stats! Then GIMPed it out in graphic form.

I have previously shared the stats and GM Overview layout of the decks in several of my TRAVELLER groups. Now, here is the result, laid out for tiling for tabletop use. Enjoy!

- CREDITS -

Graphics were generated using GIMP 2.10.20.

The overall graphic is in the style of the "Azhanti High Lightning" decks plans (GDW box game).

The original Ships Boat original is from TRAVELLER Supplement 7 - "Traders and Gunboats" and is owned by Marc W. Miller and FarFutureEnterprises, and is used here modified with an extra access cargo door, and after pixel cleaning and adjustment.

The interior icons are derived from Robert Pearce's "Starship Geomorphs" from his blog site "Yet Another Traveller Blog".

Most of the 15mm tiles (1/2 inch = 1.5 meters / 5 feet) use two pages per deck. The top few decks are just small enough to fit entirely on one page each.
